THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

HOSTED BY:

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

ASSESSING THE UNITED STATES' RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNITED NATIONS

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

HOSTED BY:

LARRY WORTZEL
Director, Asian Studies Center

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

HOSTED BY:

Research Fellow, The Heritage Foundation

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

The Heritage Foundation

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO A LECTURE

ON

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK
Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

ON

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

HOSTED BY:

LARRY WORTZEL
Director, Asian Studies Center

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Research Fellow, The Heritage Foundation

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

The Heritage Foundation

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO A LECTURE

ON

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO A LECTURE

ON

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 2001
11:00 AM
THE HERITAGE FOUNDATION'S LEHRMAN AUDITORIUM
214 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NE
PLEASE RSVP TO (202) 675-1752

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK
Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

THE PRICE OF SECURITY:
THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION'S CASE FOR INCREASING DEFENSE SPENDING

FEATURING:

DOV ZAKHEIM

Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) and
Chief Financial Officer for the Department of Defense

HOSTED BY:

KIM HOLMES

Vice President and Director, Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis
Institute for International Studies

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

FEATURING:

HON. JEANE KIRKPATRICK

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations

HOSTED BY:

DAN FISK

Deputy Director,
Kathryn and Shelby Cullom Davis Institute for International Studies,
The Heritage Foundation

President Bush delivers his first address at the United Nations on September 24, during the 56th session of the General Assembly. His remarks will establish the framework for the Administration's involvement in the UN at a time of turbulence in the US-UN relationship. To offer insights and perspectives on how the United States can effectively promote its interests in the UN system, we are pleased to present the Honorable Jeane Kirkpatrick, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations during the Reagan Administration, on September 24. Please join us for this timely discussion with Ambassador Kirkpatrick - the US Ambassador who took the "kick me" sign off the United States during another troubled time in the US-UN relationship.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

THE NATIONAL SECURITY CRISIS

Featuring

THE HONORABLE BOB LIVINGSTON

Former Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee

HOSTED BY:

MIKE FRANC

Vice President, Government Relations, The Heritage Foundation

In early August, The Heritage Foundation asked Chairman Livingston to share his thoughts on the coming crisis in U.S. defense spending. In the light of last Tuesday's tragic events it has become clear that the real crisis is not just one of dollars, but of how those dollars are spent. If America's armed forces are going to both eradicate the terrorists who perpetrated last week's violent acts, and at the same time ensure the safety of the nation, there must be a comprehensive reconfiguration of the military's offensive and defensive capabilities. Please join us this Thursday as we examine the budgetary and strategic implications the devastation of September 11, 2001 will have on our country's military.

HOSTED BY:

Ten years after the end of the Cold War, the U.S. military is in a condition that eerily resembles its condition in 1980. It suffers from underfunding and low morale, with years of fiscal neglect resulting in aging equipment and substandard living conditions for personnel. Hoping to reverse these dangerous trends, Congress approved a $14 billion increase in defense spending for FY 2002. The Pentagon and the Bush White House, however, assert that $14 billion can't even come close to meeting the overwhelming needs of the U.S. military. Just to stop the decline of the U.S. armed forces the Administration has requested an additional $18 billion in defense spending, bringing the total increase to $32 billion. In the wake of the shrinking budget surplus will Congress agree to the Administration's request? Please join us on September 24, as Undersecretary of Defense Dov Zakheim argues the Administration's case.

On July 16 2001, the presidents of Russia and China signed the Treaty for Good Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation in Moscow. This treaty is the first such agreement between these two Eurasian powers since Mao Tse-tung signed a treaty with Joseph Stalin of the U.S.S.R. in 1950. Six days later, on July 22 2001 in Genoa, Italy, Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President George Bush agreed that a U.S. missile defense could proceed, accompanied by large nuclear arms cuts by both nations. This announcement effectively meant the end of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The signing of one treaty and the abrogation of the other should signal to the Western world that a major geopolitical shift may be taking place in the Eurasian balance of power, with serious implications for the United States and its alliances. Please join us on September 25th as we examine just what those implications may be.

Sudan's 18-year-old civil war has claimed the lives of more than 2 million people, displaced about 5 million people inside the country, and sent another half-million into exile. In recent years, Sudan's radical Islamic regime, dominated by Muslim Arabs from northern Sudan, has escalated the onslaught against an opposition coalition composed predominantly of black Christians and animists living in the south to genocidal proportions. It has resorted to systematic bombing of civilians, starvation, slavery, ethnic cleansing, religious persecution, and other human rights abuses to break the will of the opposition. Furthermore, the Sudanese dictatorship is on the State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism and hosted Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the recent New York and Washington terrorist attacks, until 1996. What role can the United States play in stopping these atrocities and bringing a stable peace to Sudan?

Subject: Problems with Evacuation Briefing this Morning

Phil:

I observed during the briefing of Hall/Floor monitors at 11:00 a.m. this morning.

I have serious concerns about the inadequacies of that briefing:

First, only a handful of people attended. It was clear that many designated monitors had never been notified of the briefing. Therefore, another briefing will need to be conducted as soon as possible; this time, sufficient advance notice should be given, and attendance should be mandatory for designated hall monitors and floor monitors.

Second, those who did attend had not been informed in advance of their roles in the evacuation process. Attendees were asked to look themselves up in the back of the evacuation plan during the briefing to determine whether they were a floor monitor, a stairway monitor, etc. The fact that employees were not informed in advance of their crucial roles in the evacuation process may further explain the low turnout at the briefing. This also creates the problem that some of those who have been designated as Monitors are not willing to take on the corresponding responsibilities. It is not enough to tell designated Monitors (after they have already been designated and their names published in the evacuation plan) that they can opt out if they wish; there will be serious pressures on employees not to look bad by opting out. Rather, there should be an opt-in system that allows willing employees in each office to identify themselves.

Third, the content of the briefing itself was seriously lacking, and one attendee has already informed me that she did not find it useful and, in fact, found the lack of information and instruction disconcerting. Chuck Easley asked attendees to flip to the section of the evacuation plan that describes their responsibilities and to read it during the briefing. He also urged them to go back to their desks and study the evacuation plan to ensure they understood it. But there was NO practical instruction to attendees regarding their responsibilities during an emergency. Chuck mentioned in passing that he had heard that bullhorns and radios had been ordered and would be distributed at some point. But no one instructed the attendees, for example, "When an emergency occurs, you will be notified over your radio that the building should be evacuated. When that happens, go out into the hallway and make an announcement on the bullhorn. Then go to every office within your section and make sure the occupant of the office has evacuated the building." Moreover, no one announced when the radios or bullhorns would arrive, who would receive the radios and bullhorns, or when instruction on when and how to use the radios and bullhorns would occur. There was no explanation of how hall and floor monitors will be notified that there is an emergency and that they should begin evacuation procedures. The Evacuation Plan document contains no discussion of bullhorns or radios, does not describe how floor monitors will be informed that an emergency exists, and does not contain sufficient detail about what Monitors are expected to do in an emergency. Therefore, asking Monitors to read the plan is insufficient without specific additional instructions or demonstrations.

When I explained my concerns to Chuck Easley after the briefing, he told me that he has not been informed when bullhorns or radios will arrive. He does not know when further briefings will take place. He acknowledged that the siren/PA system in the OEOB does not work and that he does not know when that will be remedied. He tells me that he did not even know that today's briefings would take place until 6:00 PM last night. I am seriously concerned about the fact that the head of the security office has not been informed of the answers to any of those questions.

Could you please let me know when the bullhorns and radios are expected to arrive and when further briefings and/or demonstrations of evacuation procedures will take place.

Are you available to meet at 7:00pm in Room 211 to discuss the DOJ draft legislation? Judge Gonzales will chair a DCPC discussion on the legislation tomorrow morning at 10:30am. Can we try to reach internal consensus on a recommended approach tonight so that we can advise our principals before tomorrow's discussion?

I am not sure anyone wants a market where people try ex ante to value the risk and extent of terrorist attacks. Anyway, I was focusing on the airlines' ability to obtain loans/credit, which affects their continued operations, rather than the investors.

Our market works on the assumption of perfect information. In that hypothetical state, the investors that were in (and subsequently pulled out) should have calculated the risk of a major terrorist attack and subsequent gov't shut down. The pull out today suggests that that information was not properly taken into account ex ante, so the market is just going through an appropriate adjustment to revalue the stock.

Proposed Initiatives to Stabilize the Airline Industry
As a Result of the Terrorist Attacks on the United States of America

- The U.S. commercial airline transportation system is vital to the U.S. economy and to the U.S. national defense.
- The terrorist attacks of September 11 dealt a crippling blow to U.S. commercial airline transportation.
- The several day shutdown of the airline industry, the dramatic and many month long reduction in passenger demand and airline revenues, the increased costs due to the new security initiatives, and the consequences from the liability issues all resulting from the events on September 11th will generate crushing losses for the industry.
- Without immediate and significant U.S. government financial support, most of the U.S. airlines that make up the commercial air transportation system will go bankrupt and then likely liquidate shortly thereafter.
- To forestall this, Congress immediately must adopt a package of cash grants and other measures.

- The operations of the U.S. commercial airline transportation system are vital to the U.S. economy and the U.S. national defense.
    - As an essential component of tourism, business transportation, freight, and mail delivery, the U.S. commercial aviation industry contributes either directly or indirectly over 10% of the U.S. Gross Domestic Product.
    - The credit markets have over $150 billion of exposure to U.S. airline debt and lease obligations.
    - During calendar year 2000, the 1.2 million U.S. airline employees served approximately 670 million passengers traveling over 700 billion miles and provided over 25 billion ton miles of freight delivery.
    - During calendar year 2000, U.S. commercial airline operations generated significant government revenues:
        - $17.7 billion in Airway Trust Fund, Airport Charges and Agency User Fees (18.9% of the average passenger ticket price).
        - $10.2 billion of employee federal and state income and federal social security taxes.
        - $2.2 billion of federal corporate income, property, and other taxes.
- The primary aircraft and engine manufacturers for U.S. air carriers are also major U.S. defense contractors. Many of these suppliers likely would be rendered insolvent by the bankruptcy and liquidation of the U.S. airline industry.

REV_00199148

- The events of September 11 dealt a crippling blow to U.S. commercial airline transportation.
  - The total shut down of the commercial air transportation system and gradual resumption of scheduled service will have cost the U.S. airline industry approximately $ 5 billion.
  - Based on the experience of the Pan Am 103 bombing and the Persian Gulf War and factoring the severity and systemic nature of the September 11 attack, U.S. airlines conservatively forecast massive declines in airline revenue:

2001
September	60%
4th Quarter	40%
2002
1st Quarter	25%
2nd Quarter	15%

  - As a result of this dramatically reduced demand, U.S. air carriers already have taken steps to shrink in size and are expected to announce the layoff of over 100,000 employees.
  - Since commercial airline costs are largely fixed and airlines were operating at extremely low profit margins nearly all of the forecasted revenue shortfall will produce cash losses for the airlines.
  - On August 31, 2001, the aggregate industry cash balance was $9.0 billion. This aggregate cash balance will be negative $1.1 billion by November 2001 and negative $ 15 billion by June 30, 2002.
  - The overall impact on the U.S. airline industry from the September 11th attack alone is forecast to be $24 billion based on anticipated revenue declines and cost increases.

REV_00199149

- Without immediate and significant U.S. government financial support, many of the U.S. airlines that make up the U.S. commercial air transportation system will go bankrupt and then likely liquidate shortly thereafter. Airline bankruptcies will commence within days, absent U.S. government financial support.
    - Although a handful of air carriers may be able to survive, the vast majority of U.S. carriers have no means of obtaining the necessary cash to support continued operations even within the bounds of a Chapter 11 proceeding.
        - The industry is highly leveraged with most assets pledged.
        - The value of unencumbered assets (e.g. aircraft) has been severely diminished.
        - Due to historically high fuel prices and declines in business travel demand, airlines were already facing credit tightness.
        - Financial institutions will not provide the $20+ billion required to allow the airline industry to maintain its existence over the next year.
    - The impact of a significant shut down of the U.S. commercial airline transportation system will be catastrophic for the U.S. economy.
    - Based on the forecast reduction in airline revenues and the current cash positions of the U.S. carriers, U.S. carriers are expected to commence filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy within days.
        - — Within 90 days, it is estimated that most of the airline industry will be in Chapter 11.
        - — Since very few sources of cash are expected to be available, airline liquidations then will occur as cash runs out.

REV_00199150

- The Congress should enact a package of cash grants and other measures equal to $ 24 billion to preserve this vital industry. To recover the lost liquidity forecasted through the end of 2nd Quarter 2002, the industry suggests the following actions:

    - Provide an immediate cash infusion of up to $ 5 billion to compensate the industry for revenue losses and cost increases stemming from the terrorist attack on the United States of America.

    - During the period of September 1, 2001 through August 31, 2002, allow U.S. airlines to retain all ticket and cargo waybill taxes.

    - Repeal the 4.4-cent per gallon federal tax on jet fuel for the period September 1, 2001 through August 31, 2002.

    - The remainder of the necessary liquidity should be provided in the form of government grants, rebates for jet fuel consumed, loan guarantees, or other government-backed instruments.

- Such cash infusions, grants, guarantees or other instruments would be provided to the airlines proportionately according to each airline's available seat miles (ASMs) as of August 2001.

REV_00199151

- Risk Management

  - Legislation should be passed preserving any existing rights of proper parties to bring claims against the airlines for all compensatory and punitive damages for the experiences and deaths of the airlines' passengers and crew. However, the airlines would not be liable for the damage to persons and property on the ground.

- Security

  - The federal government should: (i) provide financial support for all mandated safety requirements, including reinforcement of cockpit doors and enhancement of screening devices; (ii) take over all security screening functions; and (iii) provide sky marshals on domestic flights.

- Capacity Reductions

  - In addition, to allow the industry to adjust industry capacity to the new demand conditions created by the events of September 11 in an orderly fashion, Congress should pass a bill granting antitrust immunity to airlines certificated in the United States to meet and agree on reductions of the aircraft they will fly, routes to be served, and the frequency of service on specific routes. Airlines will not be permitted to discuss pricing.

    - The statute should also authorize the airlines to exchange such financial, revenue, and passenger data and projections as is reasonably necessary to implement these agreements.

    - All such meetings would be conducted under the supervision of the Secretary of Transportation and the Attorney General of the United States.

Thanks guys.

la times reporter deborah nelson has filed a foia request for "all paper and electronic records, including email, conserning a national homeland defense task force."

as you know, these are words used regarding the use of national guard troops or the reserves to defend and protect u.s. soil. it's likely all departments are getting this request and, not to state the obvious, we'll need to be consistent in our response.

thanks, eric

Good afternoon,
Per voice mail (Brett) and telephone conversation (Viet), I'm forwarding to you Agencies and OMB comments on Justice draft bill. Under normal circumstances, the process would be to pass back these comments to Justice and Justice would let us know what agencies or EOP comments were or were not taken. Agencies or EOP would then be allowed to appeal. However, since we are planning to recirculate a revised version tomorrow, this will suffice in allowing agencies and EOP have another opportunity to review and determine whether their comments were incorporated.
My next email following this email will be comments from Defense. Please call me if you have any questions 5-5858.

Kirk: Per our phone conversation, Lozzi was never a White House staffer, let alone during Deasert Storm. at best he drove a press car in a motorcade once. This letter and his web bio with photos of him at the White House and AF #1 is ridiculous. I just hope he isn't dumb enough to try something stupid.

A Gov't reform subcommittee has asked a former Bush 43 gifts office employee (who was director of the Bush 41 gift office) to testify in a hearing covering presidential gifts. She called me about whether she should agree to testify. I have been contacted by the Hill staff, have informed leg., and contemplate telling the Hill staff that I think it is all a bad idea. I intend to tell the former gifts office employee (and the committee) that the former employee's testimony would not be viewed as being likely to help the administration. This is based on the committee's intent to address Presidential gift practices. Any thoughts?

Brett: Juliet McCarthy, who assists Brent Orrell, the faith-based Center director at DOL, tells me that it has been so long since they got their ACLU FOIA request for everything connected with the program audit that the DOL FOIA folks (or rather the solicitor) has drafted a letter that is scheduled to go out Friday, giving ACLU a copy of DOL audit report (that hasn't been done yet), and then explaining that all the supporting documentation is just that: work material that need not, and will not, be released.

I've asked Juliet to forward to me that draft letter so I can pass it on to you. Since we don't have fax machines up yet, she's trying to locate an e-draft.

Seems like we need fast action on these FOIA requests or the decision will have been made for the WH and not by the WH.

Presidential Action – Wednesday, September 19

White House Office of Communications

Today President Bush will continue to assemble a broad coalition of allies to mount a broad and sustained campaign to eradicate the evil of terrorism. Victory against terrorism will not take place in a single battle, but in a series of decisive actions against terrorist organizations and those who harbor and support them. This will be a different kind of conflict against a different kind of enemy, and it will require the strong coalition the President is assembling.

The President will meet today with the President of Indonesia, the Foreign Minister of Russia and the Foreign Minister of Germany. Yesterday the President met with the President of France, and tomorrow he will meet with the British Prime Minister.

Today the President will also meet with the House and Senate bipartisan congressional leadership to discuss steps to strengthen our economy and win the war against terrorism. The President is grateful for the patriotic spirit of bipartisanship that members of Congress in both parties continue to demonstrate.

The terrorist attacks were designed to break our nation apart – instead, they have bound our nation and our leaders together.

For more information on the President's initiatives please visit www.whitehouse.gov

Libby forward this to me because I did the classification authority delegation for Blakeman, but I think this issue was assigned to you in our meeting. I am more than happy to deal with it, though.

If you deal with these implementation issues, keep in mind that only someone with original classification authority (i.e., neither of us) has the authority to designate documents as classified.

Subject: CLASSIFICATION OF THE PRESIDENT'S LONG TERM SCHEDULE - REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE?

Stuart, Chuck, and John,
It is my understanding that White House Deputy Counsel met with the President's Secret Service Detail and they agreed that the President's long term schedule should be classified as CONFIDENTIAL for reasons of security in light of the recent terrorist attacks.
NSC (Bill Leary) has opined that such classification can be justified under the relevant standards for classification.

The issue now becomes how to implement this decision. If this is underway already, please excuse my meddling - I realize this is not an NSC Legal issue. If not, our executive secretariat and situation room inform me that some knowledgeable NSC staff may be able to advise OA and the schedulers on managing this -- if needed or wanted. They can help address such things as marking documents, setting up separate computer systems, handling/storage (safes) of classified docs & hard drives, etc.

Stuart, I'm not sure if you, Chuck Easley, or others in the west wing are handling this or not. Whoever is handling it may want to call John Ficklin on the NSC staff at 6-9221 if they would like any advice/help in this regard. John is expecting the call and will be happy to help arrange NSC assistance.

Thank you. Jock

Juliet, the WH Counsel's office is also physically in transition (I think to just other spaces within EEOB), which is probably why I have not heard back from Brett Kavenaugh, the WH lawyer who will handle the FOIA issues for us. Just in case he can't deal with this for a few days because of the office move, can you ask your DOL lawyer to hold off on sending anything out UNTIL he's heard from Brett? It should be only a short additional delay, and I would imagine ACLU is busy at the moment with concerns other than the audit reports. Thanks.

NATIONAL POW/MIA RECOGNITION DAY, 2001

- - - - - - -

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION

The noble ideals that became the foundation of this young Nation sprang from the hearts and minds of patriots who risked their lives in the name of liberty. Throughout our history, patriots of these United States of America have risen to answer the call when liberty was in jeopardy. Our military history is replete with stories of heroism in which individuals put love of country ahead of all else. Many brave Americans left their homes and families to defend this great Nation and its ideals, some never to return home.

National POW/MIA Recognition Day has special meaning to many American families. It brings alive each year the anguish they suffer from the loss of their loved ones still among the missing. These families, and the brave men they sent to war, would never call themselves heroes. However, those who answer the call of duty stand as a beacon of inspiration to all Americans for generations to come.

Throughout our history, Americans, both military and civilian, have been held captive and subjected to many unspeakable horrors. Some 50,000 former POWs are living among us, including those held captive during World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, throughout the Cold War era, and in Operation Desert Storm. We owe a profound debt of gratitude to these quiet heroes who displayed honor and indomitable wills and who sacrificed so much for this Nation.

To the families of those who are still missing, we renew our unwavering commitment and determination to account as fully as possible for their loved ones, including their recovering or repatriation, and the identification of the remains of those who have died.

On September 21, 2001, the flag of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, a black and white banner symbolizing America's POWS and MIAs and our unshakable resolve to ascertain their fate, will be flown over the White House, the U.S. Capitol, the Departments of State, Defense, and Veterans Affairs, the Selective Service System Headquarters, the National Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the Korean War Veterans Memorial, U.S. Military installations, national cemeteries, and other locations across our country. This will serve as a powerful reminder to the world that we will keep faith with those who so served America with such honor and dignity.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, GEORGE W. BUSH, President of the United States, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the laws of the United States, do hereby proclaim September 21, 2001, as National POW/MIA Recognition Day. I call upon all Americans to join me in honoring former American prisoners of war who suffered the hardships of enemy captivity and in renewing our commitment to those still missing in action. I call upon Federal, State, and local government officials and private organizations to observe this day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this day of , in the year of our Lord two thousand one, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and twenty-sixth.

Adam Greenstone called me about a proposal for the Government to pay hotels up front in connection with mixed political/official travel of the President and subsequently obtaining reimbursement from political entities. The idea has been gestating for a while, but in the context of additional security for the President, this may be a way to reduce communications of an administrative nature about the President's travel arrangements. I will follow up with Adam. (Normally I think this would be Brett's issue, but I'm confident he'd be happy for me to handle it.)

Subject:War Risk Coverage: a view from the London insurance markets

Dear Mifnet,

Aviation War Risk Liabilities Insurance

My partner in London, Philip Reed, advises that the position is as follows. London market war risk underwriters have already given notice of cancellation of War Risk liabilities cover provided pursuant to AVN52C. They are proposing to replace this with a new AVN52D with effect from midnight on Monday. The terms of this are enclosed. The material distinction (ignoring for the moment what will no doubt be a considerable hike in premium) is that liabilities cover for everything except liability to passengers will be restricted to US$50m. any one occurrence. The main problem that this leaves is that of liability for surface damage. Airlines are being asked to continue to fly in the knowledge that their cover for surface damage liability (usually a strict liability regime) is restricted to US$50m., a tiny fraction of the figures being mentioned in respect of recent events. Their salvation may come in that their lessors/financiers may ground the aircraft, on the basis that AVN52D does not enable them to comply with the insurance requirements of the relevant leases, but of course this is hardly good for revenue.

Unless the major aviation brokers can find or construct an insurance market prepared to fill this gap (and I have no doubt they are busy on this right now), it may well be that the appropriate conditions for state intervention exist.

Subject:War Risk Coverage: a view from the London insurance markets

Dear Mifnet,

Aviation War Risk Liabilities Insurance

My partner in London, Philip Reed, advises that the position is as follows. London market war risk underwriters have already given notice of cancellation of War Risk liabilities cover provided pursuant to AVN52C. They are proposing to replace this with a new AVN52D with effect from midnight on Monday. The terms of this are enclosed. The material distinction (ignoring for the moment what will no doubt be a considerable hike in premium) is that liabilities cover for everything except liability to passengers will be restricted to US$50m. any one occurrence. The main problem that this leaves is that of liability for surface damage. Airlines are being asked to continue to fly in the knowledge that their cover for surface damage liability (usually a strict liability regime) is restricted to US$50m., a tiny fraction of the figures being mentioned in respect of recent events. Their salvation may come in that their lessors/financiers may ground the aircraft, on the basis that AVN52D does not enable them to comply with the insurance requirements of the relevant leases, but of course this is hardly good for revenue.

Unless the major aviation brokers can find or construct an insurance market prepared to fill this gap (and I have no doubt they are busy on this right now), it may well be that the appropriate conditions for state intervention exist.

Henry Hyde said last night -- BEST SPEECH HE HAS EVER HEARD -- that's the highest complement I have ever heard; ditto.

By the way, Clarence said to the President last night, "God Bless You" as he greeted him at the end and the President said, "He already has" and then CT said to him, "Ride Tall in the Saddle."

Idea: We should begin planning something big for the 30 day anniversary of September 11 -- asking all America to join in in some small way -- prayers, attending church, flags, give $1 to charity or something. You guys are all doing fabulously, especially the President and the speechwriters!!!

No, the bill for airline compensation, airline insurance, victims compensation, and airline liability relief. Passed 96-1 in Senate early last night and something like 350-50 in House late last night (many Dems opposed in House because no specific relief for airline workers). President signed today.
